Larry N. Vanderhoef, UC Davis' fifth chief campus officer, was appointed Chancellor by The Regents of the University of California upon the recommendation of President Jack W. Peltason in April 1994. He succeeds former Chancellor Theodore L. Hullar.

Chancellor Vanderhoef took on the campus's day-to-day administrative duties in April 1993 when Chancellor Hullar accepted the added duties of assisting with the University's economic development initiative at President Peltason's request. Chancellor Vanderhoef was named acting chancellor in March 1994 when Chancellor Hullar resigned.

Chancellor Vanderhoef joined the Davis campus in 1984 as executive vice chancellor. He also has served for one year as interim vice chancellor for academic affairs and again as interim vice chancellor for research before an administrative reorganization in 1991 permanently added the title of provost. He also is a professor in the campus's Division of Biological Sciences and a botanist in the Experiment Station.

"Larry Vanderhoef has proven himself to be a dedicated and capable leader with a deep commitment to the Davis campus and the University of California," President Peltason said. "He combines a distinguished record in teaching and research with an excellent understanding of the importance of the public service component of the University's mission. The latter attribute is particularly significant given the scope of the Davis campus."

Under Chancellor Vanderhoef's leadership, UC Davis has undertaken a highly consultative and successful ongoing process to restructure the campus's academic, administrative and student support programs, accommodating a cut of more than $40 million in state funds.

"I am honored to have been chosen as Davis' chancellor," he said. "And I am thrilled by the prospects and the potential of this great university because, despite severe financial challenges, we have been able to collegially engage in self-renewal—perhaps the toughest test of greatness of any institution."

A plant physiologist, Chancellor Vanderhoef graduated from the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, in 1964 and received his master's degree there the following year. In 1969 he received his doctor's degree from Purdue University.

He joined the faculty of the University of Illinois, Urbana, in 1970 and served as professor and chair of the plant biology department from 1977 to 1980. In 1980 he joined the University of Maryland, College Park, as provost of the Division of Agricultural and Life Sciences.

His awards and honors include an Eisenhower Fellowship for study in the Republic of China, a Carnegie Institute of Washington Fellowship to study at Stanford University, and a NATO Research Grant to visit the University of Edinburgh. He has also been a visiting lecturer at National Taiwan University.

Chancellor Vanderhoef is chair of the Board of Trustees of the American Society of Plant Physiologists, a member of the executive committee of the Western College Association and a board member of LEED (Linking Education and Economic Development) Sacramento and of the Emerging Technologies Institute. The author of some 40 scientific publications, he has served on several National Science Foundation and Department of Energy review panels and university accrediting and review teams.

He and his wife, Rosalie, have two children: daughter Susan, 24, and son Jonathan, 21.
