

MAKING MUSIC to ENRICH OUR DAILY LIVES

Graduate student David Moschler is doing what matters right now — bringing dynamic new perspective to the art world through music. A recipient of the Barbara K. Jackson Conductor's Fellowship, David is assistant conductor of the University Chorus and the UC Davis Symphony Orchestra as well as guest conductor of the Empyrean Ensemble. David's fellowship support enables him to steward the world's musical history while sharing his knowledge and appreciation for music through inspiring performances.

Attracting the best and brightest graduate students is one of the most critical factors in building areas of academic excellence at the university. These are the scholars, like David, who will ask new questions, find solutions to some of the world's greatest challenges, and enrich our lives through the arts and humanities.

Fellowships are gifts of intellectual freedom that open doors of opportunity for future research and discovery. The honor of receiving a graduate fellowship connects a student through their work to the individual who has made it possible. These exceptional scholars then go on to become leaders in their fields and teachers for future generations.

Because of the important role graduate students serve, there is intense competition between universities to recruit the brightest and the best. UC Davis is determined to provide increased funding for these stellar scholars and invites you to partner with us through your gift of a fellowship.
